Stems and Twigs, ii, 172. Root Thoughts. The diverse relations which man sustains must come into our estimate of any religious system devised for his improvement. He is a subject of God's grace; an object of Christ's atoning love, and a sharer with his fellow-man in these things. To God he owes allegiance, to Christ love, to man sympathy and helpfulness. As the subject of God he is to be judged. Under the divine plan he is to be judged by Christ himself; the basis of final judgment on the side of God is his attitude toward God; on the side of man...
