Excerpt: . . . them and his version of the interview (as it is called) with Prescott at Portland is entirely different from Prescotts. Then whom was the learned judge to believe The plaintiffs evidence in important particulars contradicts that of Gale and Anna. Prescott also gave evidence in rebuttal and Cushing Adams, superintendent of Casein Company of America at one time, gave evidence. He is a brother of the plaintiff. He said of his brother that he was a very good man and came in touch with situations, and the idea was for him to be very familiar with the veneer business was necessary for him to have the knowledge of what veneer is, and what it can be produced for in different parts of the country. He speaks of what took place between Gale, his brother and himself when the plaintiff was employed to enter the...
