Broken Symbolism In 2001 Rob Swales received an Australia Council grant to fund the facilitation of Creative Writing Classes for a year at the maximum security, Woodford Correctional Centre, located about an hours drive north of Brisbane in Queensland Australia. . An outcome of that funding was to publish a book of the inmate students and Robs poetry. On May 29th, 2002 a volume of poetry and artwork titled, The Sweetness of Distortion, was launched to the media at The Woodford Correctional Centre. This publication was the end result of a group of transient men of all ages, professions, ethnicity and levels of education, making a decision to spend some of their prison time exploring how they ended up calling a place like Woodford home. In the safety net of the Caged Poets Society, many of the men were individually able to explore ideas, emotions, feelings and philosophies that were previously unknown to them. They decided as a group that the focus of the book should be youth at risk of offending, and that their own experiences be...

Reviews

The very best publication i at any time read through. I actually have go through and i am confident that i am going to planning to read through once more once more down the road. I found out this ebook from my i and dad advised this publication to learn.
